GROOTVADERBOSCH NATURE RESERVE: CONVERSION OF EXISTING WOOD CUTTERS VILLAGE DWELLINGS TO TOURIST ACCOMMODATION INCLUDING CAMPING SITES, A SWIMMING POOL & RELATED INFRASTRUCTURE

LOCATION: EDEN, CAPENATURE ,WESTERN CAPE, SOUTH AFRICA

DATE: 2012

In 2012 CS Studio Architects were appointed by Cape Nature and the Department of Transport and Public Works to undertake the re-design of the existing infrastructure at Grootvadersbosch Nature Reserve into a viable tourist destination.

The site has been subdivided into two Areas:

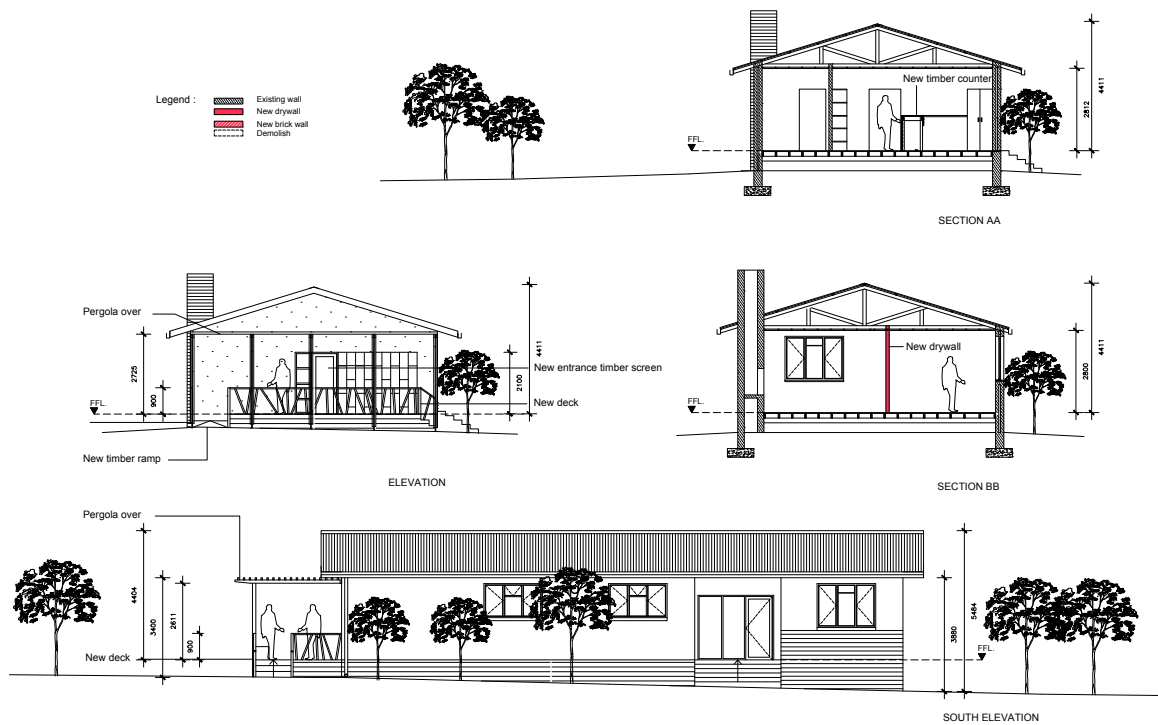

Area "A" will include the renovation of an administration building, a new shop and 3 field workers' accommodation units at the entrance of the site.

Area 'B' will entail the re-design of an old woodcutter's village . The village exists of 29 timber constructed woodcutter's dwellings that will be renovated into tourist accommodation. Part of The Cape nature brief is to transform the dwellings into a modern tourism product that is environmentally friendly and reflects positively towards Cape Nature's market position.

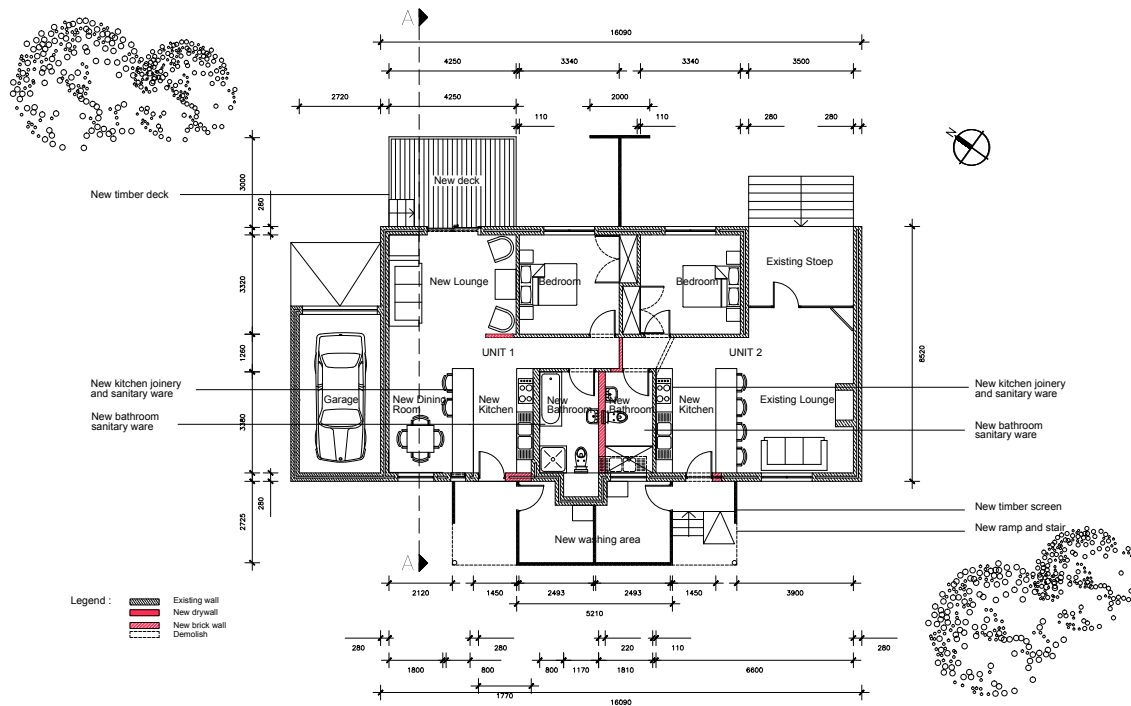

13 of the 29 timber units have been identified to be demolished. All the materials that can be salvaged from the demolition process will be recycled and re-used on the new designs. Conceptually the new design layouts will allow the units to become more open plan and invite the natural surroundings into the buildings.

The new deck areas will act as an intermediate space between the internal living areas and the natural landscape. This semi enclosed porch area will be covered by a dramatic roof that will be constructed of recycled timber and corrugated sheeting. The porch will also contain an outdoor shower and braai area.
